LEGISLATIVE DAY 17 OF 40

Hello Partners! Welcome back to the Night Owl 🦉, your nightly recap of need-to-know information and intel on what's happening under the Gold Dome.

Lawmakers in the Georgia Legislature are continuing to shape key policy debates this week, with bills moving that touch on small business growth, workforce stability, public health infrastructure, and access to care.

Senators heard testimony on Senate Bill 456, a proposal that would loosen restrictions on craft breweries by allowing expanded sales to retailers and increasing limits on direct to-go purchases. Supporters argue the bill modernizes outdated regulations and gives small Georgia businesses room to compete and grow.

The Senate also approved Senate Bill 150, which would allow retired teachers to return to the classroom without losing their retirement benefits. Backers say the measure could help ease ongoing staffing shortages in public schools, while critics note that long-term retention and pay remain central challenges.

In a party-line vote, Senate Republicans amended House Bill 54, originally focused on home health care, to include restrictions on puberty blockers for minors and to prohibit state health plans from covering gender-affirming care. The amended bill now heads back to the House, where the debate is expected to intensify.

Committees also reviewed proposals to restructure and streamline Georgia's public health system. While the discussions focus on governance and coordination, no additional funding commitments have emerged, raising questions about how reforms would be implemented in practice.

Taken together, these moves reflect a session navigating economic policy, workforce pressures, and divisive health care debates, with broader affordability concerns still hovering over the Capitol.

We hope you enjoy The Night Owl. Please let us know if you have any suggestions for additional content!
