LEGISLATIVE DAY 23 OF 40

Hello Partners! Welcome back to the Night Owl 🦉, your nightly recap of need-to-know information and intel on what's happening under the Gold Dome.

Your legislature has been busy as we edge closer to critical deadlines on the state's $42 billion budget and a slate of high-profile bills. Budget negotiators in the House and Senate remain at odds over how to deliver tax relief, with competing visions for income versus property tax cuts fueling ongoing debate as Crossover Day looms. At the same time, new tax policy proposals are gaining attention, including a measure to eliminate taxes on tips and overtime pay and a separate bill that would create sales tax-free weekends for feminine hygiene products.

On the education front, the House passed a significant expansion of the state's school-cell-phone ban by including high schools, marking a major shift in tech policy for Georgia's K-12 system.

Policy efforts beyond the budget also picked up traction today, with public safety and local governance in the spotlight. A proposal to criminalize drone flights over prisons and jails — aimed at curbing contraband deliveries — is advancing, while reforms to how municipal vacancies are filled in Columbus could reshape local government procedures.

Lawmakers also scaled back heightened protest sanctions in a bid to build broader support, though civil liberties advocates continue to raise concerns. Outside the chamber, the evolving political landscape was on display as two transgender candidates launched bids for seats in the Georgia General Assembly, underscoring shifting dynamics ahead of the May primaries.

President Trump's State of the Union is set for 9 p.m. ET tonight, and if you are so inclined to tune in, all of the major networks will be carrying the broadcast. The address will lay out the federal government's priorities in taxes, public safety, and education. Those themes are already surfacing in Georgia's legislative debates and could shape both messaging and momentum under the Gold Dome as the session moves toward key deadlines.

We hope you enjoy The Night Owl. Please let us know if you have any suggestions for additional content!
