LEGISLATIVE DAY 36 OF 40

Hello Partners! Welcome back to the Night Owl 🦉, your nightly recap of need-to-know information and intel on what's happening under the Gold Dome.

As the legislative session moves toward its final days, Monday under the Gold Dome brought the usual late-session of trying to get bills out of committee. Lawmakers moved measures on school cellphone restrictions, protest penalties, medical cannabis, and election administration, while the Senate Judiciary Committee stretched deep into the evening, wrapping up close to 9 p.m.

Along the way, lawmakers debated everything from HB 1142, which would create a registry for repeat domestic violence offenders, to HB 1470, a tort reform measure focused on lawsuits over alleged website access violations under federal and state law. It was a reminder that as Sine Die gets closer, the Capitol is not slowing down.

This bit urgency lands on a day with its own larger meaning. March 23 marks 16 years since the Affordable Care Act was signed into law, a milestone that feels especially significant in Georgia. The ACA expanded access to coverage and protections for people with preexisting conditions, but here in Georgia, the anniversary comes with a harder truth: more than 200,000 Georgians have dropped ACA marketplace coverage for 2026 as costs have risen, leaving many families to absorb the fallout. In a state that still has not expanded Medicaid, that is more than a policy failure. It is a real reminder that health care affordability remains fragile and that political decisions continue to shape who gets access to care and who gets left struggling to make it work.

We hope you enjoy The Night Owl. Please let us know if you have any suggestions for additional content!
