LEGISLATIVE DAY 37 OF 40

Hello Partners! Welcome back to the Night Owl 🦉, your nightly recap of need-to-know information and intel on what's happening under the Gold Dome.

As the countdown to Sine Die gets shorter, the legislators are doing what they do best this time of year: move fast, pile on policy, and offer a clear snapshot of what is rising to the top in the final stretch. Lawmakers kept alive a set of bills that speak volumes about the broader direction of the session. This includes Senate Bill 591, which would ban protests near houses of worship and is already drawing First Amendment concerns, and House Bill 369, which passed the Senate and would force nonpartisan elections for major local offices in Clayton, Cobb, DeKalb, Fulton, and Gwinnett counties, including district attorney, county commission, tax commissioner, and school board races. Opponents see HB 369 as more than an election administration change. They see it as a direct attempt to rewrite the political rules in some of Georgia's largest and most diverse counties.

Just as important, today underscored that the legislative session is unfolding alongside a growing political reshuffle. New special elections were called for Senate District 7 in Gwinnett and House District 177 in South Georgia, adding more movement to an already unsettled political calendar as vacancies continue to reshape the legislature in real time. At this stage of session, the story is not only what is moving, but how power is being structured, who gets to hold it, and what kind of Georgia lawmakers are trying to lock in before the clock runs out.

We hope you enjoy The Night Owl. Please let us know if you have any suggestions for additional content!

How much can a country change in 50 years: A Pew Research Center study on Census data between 1970 and 2024 found some differences in the American way of life. Since 1970 the foreign-born/immigrant population has risen from 4.7% to 14.8% in 2024. Family patterns and gender norms have also changed as Americans are significantly less likely to be married than in the past, women's participation in higher education and the workforce has increased substantially, and children are more likely to have separated parents. Economically, although many Americans are better off overall, inequality has widened, highlighting a growing gap between classes.

6 in 10 Americans say abortion should be legal in all or most cases

Americans not as swayed on abortion as you may believe: According to a survey by Pew Research Center, 60% of U.S. adults say abortion should be legal in all or most cases, compared to 38% who say it should be illegal in all or most cases, showing a clear majority of Americans still support legal access to abortion even after the Supreme Court overruled Roe V. Wade. Of the surveyed respondents 84% of Democrats believed that abortion should be legal in all or most cases compared to the 36% of Republicans who agreed. Overall, half (52%) of those surveyed believed that the decision to have an abortion is the sole decision of the pregnant woman.

Americans think the war in Iran isn't a necessity: As the U.S. war with Iran continues many Americans agree that their approval of the war will diminish as it lingers on. Of the respondents of the CBS and YouGov majority 92% responded that it is important to the U.S. to end the war as soon as possible and believe it will make the U.S. economy weaker with 32% of respondents predicting a recession by next year. Overall a slight majority of those polled disagree with the war in Iran with disapproval reaching 60%.
