

Hello Partners! Welcome to the Sine Die Night Owl 🦉, your nightly recap of need-to-know information and intel on what's happening under the Gold Dome.

Thursday night's session felt like a collision of ceremony and speed. The Capitol was full of farewell speeches, especially in the Senate, where a number of lawmakers are closing out their final session, giving the evening a reflective tone even as the legislature raced through its last major fights. But beneath the tributes and tradition, the harder truth of the night remained the same: some of the session's biggest decisions were still being made in the final hours. Gov. Brian Kemp made appearances in both chambers, urging what he called "fiscal sanity," and, as he moved through the Senate, he took a jab at the media that underscored a familiar theme of this session: those in power still have little patience for scrutiny when the stakes are high.

The policy fights matched the mood. HB 295 drew a spirited debate, continuing the pattern of controversial end-of-session measures moving under intense time pressure. SB 566 also remained part of the late-session churn, reinforcing just how much of Sine Die was shaped by maneuvering on taxes, local control, and other high-stakes issues that directly affect everyday Georgians. More broadly, lawmakers were still juggling major questions around property taxes, election-related proposals, and transit as the night pushed closer to adjournment.

The clearest example of the night's procedural whiplash was the property tax fight. After HB 1116 stalled in the Senate, leadership kept the proposal alive by moving its language into SB 33 and advancing it that way instead. It was a classic Sine Die move: when one vehicle falters, find another and keep going. That scramble captured the broader concern many have raised throughout the session, that major policy choices are too often rushed forward through substitutions and last-minute rewrites, leaving little room for public understanding or meaningful accountability.

The House and Senate both approved the $38.5 billion fiscal year 2027 budget, capping off one of the biggest must-pass fights of the session. Reporting showed the budget deal coming together under the wire, after days of back-and-forth over spending priorities. And that matters, because budgets are never just spreadsheets. They are values documents. They reveal who the state is willing to invest in, whose needs get prioritized, and who is still being asked to wait.

The Senate closed on a more personal note with a warm tribute to Sen. Ed Harbison, the Dean of the Senate, honoring his long tenure and the institutional memory he has carried under the Gold Dome for more than three decades. It gave the chamber one of its more meaningful moments of the night, a pause to recognize both service and legacy before the night ended. The 2026 legislative session officially adjourned at 1 a.m., bringing the long day to an end.

We hope you enjoy The Night Owl. Please let us know if you have any suggestions for additional content!

RESEARCH AND POLLING

Democrats and Independents Think ICE and CBP Should Not Be Allowed To Arrest and Detain People in or Around Health Care Facilities, Republicans Say They Should

In general, do you think ICE or CBP should be allowed or should not be allowed to arrest and detain people in or around hospitals, doctors offices, or health clinics where they are seeking care?

Reactions to Trump removing policy protecting sensitive locations from ICE: A KFF Health poll tracked reactions to Trump's reversal of guidelines for Immigration and Customs Enforcement and Customs and Border Protection near "sensitive areas" such as hospitals, schools, and places of worship. Of those polled, the majority (59%) of respondents disagree with Trump's decision, responding that they don't think ICE and CBP should be able to arrest people in or near healthcare facilities. Democrats and Independents widely report a fear that ICE and CBP presence near hospitals will discourage people from seeking medical care with 76% of Democrats and 49% of Independents reporting very concerned compared to only 26% of non-MAGA Republicans.

High levels of concern are expressed across all age groups:

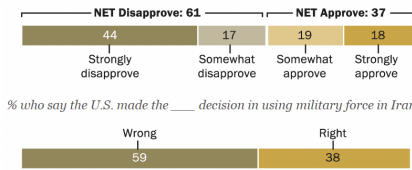

- Gen Z (1997 - 2008): very concerned (35 percent), somewhat concerned (43 percent), not so concerned (14 percent), and not concerned at all (7 percent);
- Millennials (1981 - 1996): very concerned (39 percent), somewhat concerned (42 percent), not so concerned (7 percent), and not concerned at all (10 percent);
- Gen X (1965 - 1980): very concerned (36 percent), somewhat concerned (43 percent), not so concerned (8 percent), and not concerned at all (10 percent);
- Baby Boomers (1946 - 1964): very concerned (39 percent), somewhat concerned (43 percent), not so concerned (10 percent), and not concerned at all (6 percent);
- Silent Generation (1928 - 1945): very concerned (31 percent), somewhat concerned (41 percent), not so concerned (15 percent), and not concerned at all (8 percent).

Americans believe AI will do more bad than good: A Quinnipiac poll from April on public opinion about artificial intelligence found that since April of 2025, 60% of Americans reported that they have never used AI compared to 27% reported in the recent poll. Despite an increase in users over the past year, over half of those polled feel that AI will do more bad than good marking an 11% increase since April 2025. Of Gen Z, Millennials, Gen X, Baby Boomers, and the Silent Generation there is a general consensus that artificial intelligence is negative for the workforce with 7/10 Americans believe that AI will result in less job opportunities in the future.

About 6 in 10 disapprove of Trump's handling of Iran conflict; as many say decision to use force was wrong

% who ___ of how Donald Trump is handling the U.S. military action against Iran

1 in 4 Americans think war in Iran will make the U.S. less safe: In a Pew Research poll on approval of U.S. military action in Iran there is a general disagreement with U.S. action with Iran and the longevity of the war so far. Nearly six out of ten polled respondents think the U.S. made the wrong decision with the U.S. military force in Iran and Over four in ten think action so far is not going well. When asked about their predicted longevity of the war, nearly six in ten respondents believe that the war will last for at least six more months (58%).
